Stop In The Name Of Wings

SUBHEADLINE

Fiery And Finger-Licking

It's easy to guess what's in each basket at Wing Stop's Fowler location - just watch the customers. The man gulping water obviously enjoys Atomic, once voted by the Tampa Tribune as the hottest sauce in town. Next to him, a pile of perfectly seasoned garlic parmesan wings inspires a woman to order more for takeout.

Marcus McCants witnesses similar scenes every day. He's the owner of this location and the first to bring the franchise to the Bay area. He transported the taste of Dallas to Tampa three years ago, when he couldn't get enough of Wing Stop's lemon pepper wings. The Bay area now has a similar love affair with Wing Stop's chicken and Texas-inspired side items like bourbon beans and pearl potato salad.

"Our flavors are intense, and we make everything to order here at the restaurant," Marcus says. "Nothing is frozen."

The blue cheese dunked into by carrot and celery sticks is homemade. Even the french fries are sliced daily from potatoes and then sprinkled with a secret seasoning recipe. Chicken fingers are offered dipped or with sauce on the side for those who shun bones. Just the right amount of sauce makes the flavors of cajun, original hot, mild, hickory smoked BBQ, hawaiian and teriyaki stand out.

From a 10-piece order to over 100 with all the fixings, Wing Stop's got your wingding covered. They handle everything from leisurely lunches to corporate catering functions. Sports go better with wings, so a March Madness promotion will be offered throughout the NCAA tournament. Easy online ordering at www.WingStop.com allows wing-lovers to plan in advance for the big game.

Beer and malt beverages are available, and come in handy with a basket full of Atomic chicken-fire bliss.

"We're the wing experts," Marcus says. "Call us or stop in for the best wings you've ever tasted."
